

The Bachelor of Science in Organizational Leadership degree program offers opportunities to students interested in expanding their professional horizons. It provides a liberal arts education with a focus on the complex social, cultural, and organizational issues that confront leaders in today's workforce. This program allows for flexibility through electives that support career goals. Classes are offered in a flexible format that allows adults to schedule classes that fit their work requirements. Students can schedule classes through online learning in conjunction with traditional on-campus courses in the evenings. In addition, the program offers a series of accelerated-hybrid seven-week courses that might allow earlier completion of the degree.

Gain Marketable Experience in College

Penn State helps students to develop and build skills such as critical thinking, decision making, problem solving, and team building that can be utilized immediately in the workforce. The program provides students with a diverse and highly effective education, enabling them to enhance their opportunities and to expand their career options.

Graduate Education

Graduates from the B.S. in Organizational Leadership program will be well prepared for both graduate and professional schools. Earning a master's degree in human resources, labor relations, or business administration with a concentration in human resources management is recommended for those seeking general and top management positions.
